

Maria João Jacinto is the Executive Director of Patient Innovation. She is also a postdoctoral contracted at Católica Lisbon School of Business and Economics for research focus on 'Revolutionising Healthcare: Empowering patients by valuing innovation and promoting entrepreneurship'.

Maria João Jacinto received her Ph.D. degree in Bioengineering framed in MIT Portugal program, and her MSc in Biological Engineering from Instituto Superior Técnico; Maria João Jacinto has a strong background in Engineering and Technology sciences. Currently, Maria João research is focused on user innovation in healthcare, namely the patient innovation phenomenon, related to the Patient Innovation platform, by increasing the number and quality of the solutions developed by patients that are published in the online platform with medical supervision, as well as to promote contact with innovators and support them in various areas.

Maria João had different international collaboration and research experiences as her master thesis in University of Ghent, in European bioengineering research projects and part of her PhD thesis in University of Houston, Texas, USA.