

Roberto Henriques is currently Associate Professor at NOVA Information Management School of the NOVA University of Lisbon, where he is deputy director for Teaching and Pedagogical Affairs. He is director of the Master's degree in Data Science and Advanced Analysis. He holds a Ph.D. in Information Management (NOVA), a Master's degree in Science and Geographic Information Systems and a degree in Biophysical Engineering. The interest of his research includes data analysis and decision support systems using artificial intelligence and machine learning.

His work has been published in several international magazines and conferences of high quality and reputation. He has also managed and participated in numerous knowledge transfer and innovation projects in several areas such as health, marketing and CRM, among others.