

Jorge Tavares holds a PhD in Information Management a Master in Statistics and Information Management and a degree in Pharmaceuticals sciences. During the last 20 years worked both Professionally and Academically in health, eHealth and pharmaceutical industry. Currently he is Strategic Planning Director (Europe Region) in a multinational Pharmaceutical company.

From the academic standpoint started his career path in the Faculty of Pharmacy (Lisbon University) in cutaneous bioengineering, doing biostatistics analysis and modeling. More recently at NOVA IMS developed scientific work in the field of eHealth and statistical adoption models, with papers published in top journals in the field of health information management and medical informatics. Currently he is also a regular invited reviewer in top journals and speaker in international congresses. He is also an invited Professor in post-graduations in the healthcare field.